- What is the typical class size for Executive Education courses?

Class sizes for Executive Education courses are typically small to facilitate interaction and engagement. The specific class size may vary by program but is designed to ensure a personalized learning experience.

- Who are the instructors for Executive Education programs, and what are their qualifications and industry experience?

Our instructors are experienced professionals and experts in their respective fields. This to ensure that there is a wealth of practical knowledge and industry experience to the classroom.

- Is there any flexibility in the course schedule for working professionals?

Yes, we understand the needs of working professionals. Many of our Executive Education programs offer flexible scheduling options, including evening, weekend, and online classes to accommodate busy professionals.

- Are there any prerequisites or specific work experience requirements for admission into certain Executive Education programs?

No, there are no external prerequisites or specific work experience requirements for admission into our Executive Education programs. However, it is important to note that some of our courses have internal prerequisites. This means that, in order to qualify for certain courses within our program offerings, participants may need to have completed another one of our courses. These internal prerequisites ensure that participants have the foundational knowledge and skills necessary to excel in more advanced courses, ultimately enhancing the overall learning experience. Please contact us for further details.

- What networking opportunities are available for Executive Education students to connect with peers and industry professionals?

Networking is an integral part of our programs. You will have opportunities to connect with fellow participants, alumni, and industry experts through workshops, seminars, and events hosted by MSBM.

- Can I transfer credits earned in an Executive Education program toward a degree program at UWI Mona in the future?

At present, our Executive Education programs are non-credit courses. However, if you are considering pursuing a degree program at the University of the West Indies, Mona in the future and have completed one of our certificate programs, it may be worthwhile to inquire with the University about the possibility of receiving exemptions from specific courses or modules based on your completion of our certificate program. Please note that the decision on whether to grant exemptions would be at the discretion of the University, and they would be able to provide you with specific information regarding this matter.

- How is the success and impact of Executive Education programs measured?

Success and impact are measured through participant feedback, and post-program assessments. We continuously evaluate and improve our programs based on this feedback.
