The Caribbean Policy Research Institute and the Department of Government, UWI Mona, presents "Debating the Model: State versus Market in Jamaica's Development"; a panel discussion featuring Damien King, Tony Heron and Indianna Minto to be held Monday, February 16, 2009, 9 a.m. - 11 a.m. in the Council Room, UWI Mona.

Damien King is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Economics, UWI Mona and is also Vice President and Senior Research Fellow at the CaPRI where he has done research on debt and informal investment schemes and also supervises the institute’s economic research agenda. He earned his B.A. from York University in Toronto, Canada, an M.Sc. from the UWI, Mona and a Ph.D. from New York University - all in economics. His current research is on computable general equilibrium modeling, particularly in respect of the effect of emerging trading arrangements.

Tony Heron, CaPRI Visiting Fellow, is a Senior Lecturer at The University of Sheffield, UK. Tony Heron was awarded his PhD. from the Department of Politics, at Sheffield. His main research interests relate to the theory and practice of international and comparative political economy, especially in relation to the politics of international trade and development. His current research project is entitled 'the global politics of economic adjustment in the textiles and clothing industry'.

Indianna Minto, CaPRI Visiting Fellow, is a Research Fellow at the Centre for International Governance Innovation, Canada. She earned her B.A and M.A. from The UWI and is a PhD Candidate at the London School of Economics. Her research spans areas of governance and development with a special focus on the Caribbean.

For further information, please call 970-3447/2910 or email us at info@capricaribbean.org. Please make an effort to attend.