1:00PM - 2:30PM	LECTURE	MONA SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING Topic: Van der Waals Heterostructures: Fabrication and Materials Issues Overview: Artificial van der Waals heterostructures of two-dimensional materials offer the possibility of creating layered structures with a wide variety of starting materials and control of composition at the single atomic layer limit. To create such structures, developed a van der Waals transfer technique which largely eliminates interfacial contamination. This talk will detail our recent progress in materials engineering for van der Waals heterostructures, including control over disorder, achieving robust electrical contacts, controlling interlayer rotation angle, and improving the quality of the constituent materials. Presenter: Prof. James Hone; Prof. Wang Fong-Jen, Department of Mechanical Engineering and Director, Center for Precision Assembly of Superstratic and Superatomic Solids (Columbia MRSEC), Columbia University	Department of Physics Lecture Room B
3:00PM - 5:00PM	WORKSHOP #1 (jointly with workshop 2)	MONA SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING Topic 1: Chemical and Contact Doping in 2D Monolayers Overview: While 2Dnanomaterials offer exciting building blocks for devices with a wide range of applications, much remains to be understood about the local chemical and electronic properties when taken to the monolayer limit, and how these properties may be tuned by chemical and contact doping. Here, a complementary suite of x-ray spectroscopy techniques, supported by density functional theory, used to correlate atomistic details of local bond environment with electronic properties and work function in 2-D nanomaterials. We have found that both chemical doping of graphene, particularly with Chlorine, and contact doping between layers in 2Dheterostructures offer promising routes to atomically tailored electronic devices with higher performance and lower power consumption. Presenter: Dr. Wayne Archibald, lecturer, Mona School of Engineering	Department of Physics Lecture Room B
3:00PM - 5:00PM	WORKSHOP #2 (jointly with workshop 1)	MONA SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING Topic 2: Heterostacks&BioDesign: A materials revolution Overview: Fashion is cited as the second most polluting industry in the world, second only to oil extraction. Yet fossil fuels and petrochemicals are infused in every stage of production. The wastewater from textile plants are the single largest industrial source of water pollution today, in the volume generated as well as the toxicity of effluents. We extract biopolymers extracted from readily abundant, rapidly replenishing, low energy consuming organisms, such as kelp, microbes and fungi, to develop biomaterials for textile applications. At the end of their useful life, the fully biodegradable products may be composted to become nutrients for the next generation of materials. Coloration, water resistance, and flame retardancy are achieved utilizing indigenous techniques without the use of toxic or	Department of Physics Lecture Room B
